One Man's Meat

With this article I am setting a precedent (at least that's what the editor tells me). This column will appear in the Collegian regularly, being passed on to another upperclassman when I leave. I wish it made clear that all opinions put forth here are my own and are not necessarily those of the Collegian staff.

There is an attitude of indifference prevalent upon this campus and in the whole United States concerning the coming election. Interest is low even though this could be one of the most important elections we will ever hold. If the parties aren't Tweedledee and Tweedledum, as the late Raymond Clapper put it, then the American people can choose which road they wish to travel. Their apathy could indicate that they feel there is no real issue between the Democrats and the Republicans.

This is not true and the prevalence of the idea, in my mind, is dangerous. I don't mean that we would cease to exist if the wrong party is elected, but I do mean that if we vote in ignorance of the basic issues, then we deserve all the ills that could arise from this ignorance.

As Mr. Chalmers said a couple of weeks ago in Assembly, College is one place where we can be objective and make our choice after finding the facts.

Probably the most basic fact to understand is that we are not voting for just Roosevelt and Dewey, but we must consider their party followers. The president cannot do anything without the support of his party, unless they hold the majority in Congress. So we must not stop with the Deweys and Roosevelts, but must consider the Trumans and Brickers, the Fishes and Berkleys, the Wheelers and the Willkies.

I will readily admit that Mr. Dewey does not seem to be raising any basic issues. But we must not assume there are none, for it is possible Mr. Dewey's followers will not let him raise fundamental issues.

The most basic issue is in the field of Foreign policy. We must attempt to prevent a world war every

Anti-Saloon League Chaperones Dance

A last minute flash from Kenyon's grape-vine reveals that the invitation of the Dance Committee to six ladies from the headquarters of the Anti saloon League at Wadsworth to attend Dance Week-end as chaperones, has been accepted.

Writing on behalf of herself and the other five, Mrs. Clarence L. Peabody, chairman of the organization, stated: "We women of the League welcome this opportunity to come to Kenyon College, and we assure you that we shall do our very best to maintain the dignity and strict propriety that you desire. We know that you feel, as we, that dances such as these, conducted under the watchful eyes of a wise Administration, can fully satisfy the young college gentleman, making uncalled for the "last resorts" of drinking and promiscuity that sometimes have attended social affairs in other institutions."

The Collegian recognizes that this is an unprecedented innovation, but trusts that the procedure will meet with the wholehearted cooperation of the student body.

this—it offers so many topics for, shall we say, discussion? Also the fact that the author is anonymous and knows that his views don't necessarily represent those of the "Collegian" makes for greater freedom and enjoyment.

With the momentous week-end finally upon us, our thoughts naturally turn towards wine, women and more wine (whoever coined that phrase had obviously never heard of whiskey.) Despite the frigidity of the faculty's frown, they know as well as we that the Coca Cola will be well spiked, as will be a goodly proportion of the student body, and no one has ever accused the chaperones of regretting it.

We realize that we can look back on a goodly heritage, and are sadly aware that it is impossible for us to attain pre-war standards, either in the quality or quantity drunk, but you can bet your date's

KENYON FACES FIRST TEST OCTOBER 7th

Otterbein Powerful Foe

The inauguration of the current football season occurs October 7, on the Otterbein field. This game may well prove the testing ground for the squad's talent, drive, and initiative. The outcome of this game, in all events, will be determined by the last two of the above mentioned qualities.

Otterbein boasts a large team—a team against whose line Kenyon players will have to fight for every bit of yardage gained. The Columbus paper recently carried a sporting page article which announced the transfer of two Ohio State athletes to Otterbein. These two men, in addition to Bonavitch — last year's passing and plunging threat—may be expected to give the Cardinal's backfield added power. Coupled with this fact, Otterbein will probably present their traditional rugged line. Such an aggregation may well cause Kenyon "jitters".

The Purple and White eleven to oppose the Otterbein competitors will be outweighed and will most likely be less experienced; but they will possess two valuable assets—conditioning and that intangible mettle — fight. These qualities are the backbone of the 1944 Kenyon pigskin assemblage. But in reality, they are the mainstay of every successful offensive eleven.

While Otterbein can be banked upon for power formations, Kenyon will unleash a variety of plays that will display plenty of speed and deception. In short, the Lord's attack will be wide-open, diversified, and geared to our type of players. The Otterbein game will present two teams, each using a different variety of offense. The sixty minutes of action at Otterbein should prove interesting, to say the least.

October 7, in addition to being the gridiron opener, will be the harvest reaped from a practice session begun last July. The Otterbein game will be the squad's first "real" action. For each afternoon the boys drag themselves up the "Hill" from Benson Bowl, is bringing them closer to their initial assault.

The measure of evaluation of the team's quality cannot

Fraternities and the Post-War World

In this issue the Collegian presents the first half of an article written by Alvan E. Duerr, one-time National President of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and also a Kenyon graduate of 1893, entitled Post War Planning for Fraternities. The article appeared in the July 1943 issue of Banta Greek Exchange.

What Mr. Duerr says in the initial half of the article is by way of introduction to the concrete plan, (which the Collegian shall offer with the next issue) he presents fraternities for the post-war world. However, Mr. Duerr's sage comments concerning fraternities in the light of Democracy and Social Competency should be carefully studied by all students, especially by students at Kenyon College who are connected with fraternities.

In the July 14, 1944 issue of the Kenyon Collegian the fraternity situation of our school was presented. We thought then, and still do, that fraternities needed to be reminded of their proper place in the college. The problem was not solved by the July 14th issue, we did not expect it to be; however, we must constantly think of our problem in a realistic way. We hope, therefore, that Mr. Duerr's article will be of help in implementing our thinking.

Post-War Planning for Fraternities

By Alvan E. Duerr

A Post-War Plan

The belief is general that fraternity life will be different after the war, but no one seems to know what the difference will be. Yet, unless we have some idea, at least of the direction of the impending change, how can we be ready for it when it arrives?

We have considerable data on which we can base some conclusions:

Social and Economic Factors

1. This war is merely a phase of a social revolution which has been sweeping over the face of the earth for decades, whose objective, to quote Governor Bricker, is to "rediscover the place of the individual in society." It is the penalty we are paying for the loose, if not unmoral, thinking of the past half century, for our emphasis on the material, and our rejection of the intangible. The financial burden of the war will be spread over at least the next generation, and it would be foolhardy to expect the "American way of living" to return soon in all its questionable glory. The individual will have less money, a better sense of values, and will insist upon a more adequate return. We shall hear more about democracy in its real sense, for the individual cannot recover his place in society except on a democratic basis of self-determination. There will be a day of reckoning for many a delusion with which we have been nursing ourselves into a sense of false security. The perverted doctrine of the superiority of races or groups must fall by the wayside; superficial and arbitrary distinctions will seem less tolerable. We may even have to work and save for our own security instead of counting on handouts.

Education's Problem

2. The educational program seems due for drastic overhauling, for it is conceivable that an impoverished and war-weary people will tolerate a philosophy of education which has made possible two world wars in one generation. If the individual is to be restored to his place in society, education must rediscover him, abandon the technique of mass production, and concentrate on the development of the individual as a responsible member of society. It must assume a large share of the blame for the loose thinking of the past, and repair the damage. It must restore the recognition of the intangibles, that means the humanities, among other things. Unless the war is teaching us nothing, the Liberal Arts college should come into its own again and stand at the focal point of all education. The present domination of the technical is a war

Rudy Kutler Discusses:

The Student Body

On the seventh of October Kenyon College will engage Otterbein College in a football game. The team that will take the field that day will do more than just engage in a game of football. It will provide the occasion to place Kenyon College on review.

To start with, the members of the team will be observed, their physical condition noted, their individual abilities and collective strength as a team compared. As the game progresses, their spirit, fight, courage, their desire to win in spite of odds, their treatment of the opponents, officials, and each other will become evident. In the second place the spirit, fight, courtesy, and gentlemanly conduct exhibited by the student body while the game is in progress will be very much in the public eye. The casual spectator will leave the game thinking that Kenyon College must be a pretty swell place or that Kenyon College is an institution without much character. For the conduct of every one connected with that team will reflect the character and integrity of the institution and the individuals connected with it.

We have all smiled at the boorish athlete who feigns injuries, throws his head gear when taken out of a game, uses abusive language towards his opponents and officials, pretends to be awfully tough when he gets hit a little harder than he likes. The student body that joins the sorehead in their desire to "Get that man," that rides the hard working officials, and finally leaves the field feeling that the team has let them down leaves us with a feeling of pity and contempt for that institution and a glowing of pride for Kenyon and what she stands for.

Not so long ago I met a man who, upon learning that I coached at Kenyon, told me of a Kenyon-Reserve game he saw many years ago. He did not remember the score but he said "I shall never forget the spirit and fight of the Kenyon team and the marvelous support the Kenyon students gave it. How they cheered! How they sang! Kenyon must measure, which must be abandoned with war, unless we want a state of perpetual war instead of the peace for which we say we are fighting. Teachers must be held to a stricter accountability to society; their teaching must be more constructive. Men must leave college with something approaching a philosophy of life, which connotes firm convictions and a sense of social obligation.

Ex-Service Men in College

3. Men who have been in the service will return to college in large numbers. There is talk even of the Government's financing a college education for many of them to soften the impact of general unemployment. These men will have had a brutalizing experience, and the reaction against the discipline and the hardship they have undergone will be sharp. The question will arise whether, as happened twenty-five years ago, they shall set the mores for the campus, or an intelligent effort shall be made to restore normal attitudes and standards.

Status of Fraternities

4. The college fraternities are in a stranger position today than ever before in their history. Fewer institutions would be without them. They have never received so much sympathetic help from college administrations as they are receiving during this crisis. For, if we read present trends correctly, the greater emphasis on the social competency of the individual points more than ever to the need of organizations which concern themselves primarily with training the individual in the practical art of living effectively in a group. And it follows that the fraternities could easily be indispensable to education in its task of developing the individual in terms of his place in society. That augurs a greater sense of responsibility on the part of the college for what fraternities are and do. As the college is subjected to rigorous scrutiny and revision, so in turn will subject every agency on its campus to the same scrutiny and revision, and will insist that it conform to the revised educational program. That means a closer relation between college and fraternity, a more direct supervision of the fraternity, a recognized share in the educational program, and greater responsibility to the college for its performance.

If this line of reasoning is correct in its broad principle, it should not be too hard to formulate a post-war program that will enable the fraternities to start off on the right foot when normal conditions prevail once more, and then to play a really significant rôle in the undergraduate life. Let us therefore examine in some detail a few of the changes in our past practice which seem imperative if we are to fit into the new order of things. This new order should make its start in our educational system, since that must give to the individual the disposition and the equipment to do what needs to be done.

A Glance Backward

In 1828, sixteen-year-old Henry Caswell arrived in the United States to enter Kenyon College. The son of an English clergyman and nephew of Bishop of Salisbury, young Caswell reached Gambier on October 3rd of that year to become the only English student enrolled at Kenyon. He landed at New York on Sept. 18, went by steamboat to Albany, by stagecoach to Schenectady, by canal-boat to Utica, by stagecoach to Buffalo, by steamboat to Sandusky, by stagecoach to Mt. Vernon, and finally by a hired wagon on to Gambier.

Describing Gambier, Kenyon, and its founder, Bishop Philander Chase, Caswell wrote in a letter to his father which is now in the possession of the College Library:

Describes College

"The site has been removed more than 30 miles from the spot mentioned in the bishop's letter to Lord Kenyon. The college now stands upon a beautiful hill, a few hundred yards north of Owl creek and six miles east of Mount Vernon. From the top of the college is an extensive view of many miles, but nothing is seen except the almost interminable forests of this country which extend for hundreds of miles on every side. The trees are most majestic. The wild animals are numerous. There are three kinds of bears two of which are very fierce. There are likewise many wolves. The rattle snakes are innumerable (notwithstanding Bullock's assertion). The bishop tells me that the workmen have killed great quantities and there are 6 hanging up in his room which were killed under the window a few days ago. Nobody is afraid of them. There are also wild boars, deer, & wild turkeys. Not Bothered With Mt. V.

"The pigeons are innumerable. No town of any kind is built here as yet and the college will not be habitable before next summer. There are only a few temporary wooden buildings erected for the use of the bishop, the professors & the students. There are both a school and a college with about 50 students. The following is the plan of the present erections. The bishop's palace consist of a few logs laid together & roofed with shingles. The bishop is a most delightful man, he is an American, a native of Vermont. He has given up everything that he may forward the college. He has just sold his little farm to procure money to pay the workmen. When I arrived here I had the small sum of 80 dollars remaining be a fine college to inspire such spirit and loyalty." Thus, a total stranger, with no Kenyon connections, one who has never seen the College, received a fine impression created by the Kenyon students in the stands and on the field.

From time to time we hear the statements that all athletics should be merely occasional for exercise and leisure time activity. The student bodies, the alumni, and the general public have never been interested in football as physical training. Intercollegiate athletics originated and have continued as an expression of loyalty, as an attempt to maintain and exalt the dignity and honor of the college in some of those things in which college students are deeply interested. This expression of loyalty has more to do with the soul than with the body, hence serves all the students, those who play as well as those who cheer.

Unlike the extreme sophistication that existed in some colleges in the not too distant past, enthusiastic and spirited expression of support has been and should be the order of the day at all Kenyon games. Such support not only demonstrates loyalty but is a necessary incentive to the team on the field. Small squads are more dependent than ever before on the cheers of the student body to rejuvenate those tired muscles, and at times, those discouraged minds.

I am convinced that when you see the team in action you will be proud. They will be in excellent physical condition. They will play a hard driving and running brand of football. They will play to win until the last whistle blows. And last but by no means least, they will at all times, under all conditions, conduct themselves as gentlemen. After the game, win or lose, you will be proud of them and your association with Kenyon College.

from the expenses of my journey. I immediately put it into the bishop's hands, and you cannot imagine with what transports he received it. He said that at that time he had not a dollar in his possession but that God had continued to supply him in this fortuitous manner like Elijah in the wilderness. Mrs. Chase is a delightful & wonderful woman about 35 years old. The bishop is scarcely 60 & without a grey hair.

"The college will be a fine generation. Which man and which party can best be trusted with the task is up to us to determine. My choice is Roosevelt and the Democratic party. I will admit that the Wheelers do not look too encouraging, but they are not in the control, while I am convinced that the Tafts do control the Republican party. Thus, while on the surface, both Dewey and Roosevelt appear to be in favor of a liberal program, the issue is still between the liberals and conservatives.

The same distinction exists on the domestic front. It is admitted by both sides that we must have somewhere near full employment and must never permit another depression. The Conservatives have never solved this problem. Even in 1924, we were not enjoying full employment. The New Deal broke into virgin territory, since it was then forced into the effort rapidly because of circumstances. Mistakes were made, but lessons were learned.

Even the Conservatives do not wish to revoke the Wagner Act, but they do want to stand still. The problems are but partly solved. We must go forward in order to finish the job. We must have a liberal and progressive administration. This is the basic issue in the coming election. I only hope that we here, and all the American people snap out of their apathy and think on November 7, 1944.

corsage that we'll do our damndest. Looking at it patriotically, our loyal alumni over seas are expecting us to keep up the old traditions, and we should and will do our best. Since everything is blamed on tradition, we can dissipate with a will and a free conscience, knowing that the building 170 feet long with a tall steeple. The terms will not exceed at the utmost 80 pounds during the whole time I remain in the college, viz, until I am 21 when the bishop says I may take orders. Food is so cheap that we live quite luxuriously. The students are never employed at manual labour; indeed all is much the same as in English colleges. The schoolboys have no bounds, but range the forest at liberty. Few however venture far off for fear of losing themselves in which case they might be starved. I find that I shall occupy a high rank in the college & probably take my degree of Bachelor of Arts in the ensuing spring.

This experienced soak has long maintained that a man can be most easily analysed by the way he mixes his drinks. If you are still able to see on Saturday night, why not glance around and test this theory while casually igniting your second pack of Pall Malls? You will see (bleary-eyed) that the "tough guy" chases his date and shot with beer, until someone eventually chases him, in turn, into the basement, to spare the parlor rugs. The sophisticated type mixes with soda or water, and lights his new cigarette from the last one bummed from his date. And the novice, bless his optimistic soul, concocts each drink of half a shot (acquired from the bottle of yours truly, who is by this time under the nearest table, assiduously searching for cockroaches.) After mixing his twenty drops of hard liquor with a full bottle of coke, our young hopeful drinks it like a man, and insists insistently to everyone present that he

CANDID COMMENTS

Kenyon begins its 1944 season on Oct. 7, at Otterbein. If the team lives up to expected standards it will be the fastest ever to be assembled on Benson Bowl. What can be expected? We can tell what type of team Kenyon will field by the players. Let's look them over.

At left end is Eddy Young, a recent newcomer from Shaker Heights high school. He has distinguished himself as an able pass-receiver and punter. At the other end is Johnny Hartman. Although lacking previous experience, Johnny has become an outstanding threat with his consistent playing. In support of these two will be Neil Pratt from Erie, Penna. and Jim Branch who hails from Rocky River, Ohio.

Dick Roberts, rangy hold-over from last year's squad will play right tackle and is well equipped to fill this position. Dick is the heaviest and tallest man on the team. Dan Dunlap, another one of no past experience, holds down left tackle. His reckless and hard charging stamp him as an outstanding tackle. Ray Ferrell and Johnny Gulick will be called on as reserves. Plenty of fight can be expected from these boys.

Chuck Koehler and Bob Stewart are to be counted on at the guard positions. Koehler is a steady and deadly down field blocker. Koehler will be important in eliminating the line backers, constant pests to our back field. Stewart, already a demon on de-

President Appraises Post-War Planning

President Gordon Keith Chalmers spoke at the Assembly Tuesday, September 19 on a Post-War Peace Plan. He expressed the fear that similar results might come out of the peace planning of this war as happened after the last conflict. President Chalmers asserted a blocking or frustration of a plan including a powerful international society of States would again be a mere political move carried on by a handful of petty isolationist Senators who would see in this course a way to rise in power politically.

Commenting on the Dunbarton Oaks Conference, President Chalmers stated that in view of the opposition already directed at this conference that if this view is not pessimistic, it is decidedly realistic, and the whole matter is due a great deal of concern by all of us.

Kenyon Singers

Get Under Way

The Alumni will be interested to know that the Kenyon Singers have been revived.

At present there are about twenty members who regularly meet under the guidance of the Reverend Mr. Clement L. Welsh. Mr. Welsh, the college chaplain, renewed this activity about the same time he undertook the Speculators Club.

The Kenyon Singers meet in the Pi Kappa Hall from 6:45 to 8:00, Monday and Thursday evenings. They hope, besides singing on the campus, to go off the "Hill" for the entertainment of Alumni Groups.

The members have decided against a formalized organization with the regular officers, but there will be two assistants for Mr. Welsh to take care of the extensive assemblage of music which the Kenyon Singers have collected over their long life; John Kaichen will act as Librarian. There is also to be a Business Manager to help Mr. Welsh with the arrangements of the local and outside engagements.

Freshman Lecture

Collegiate attendance at the Sunset Club has declined noticeably since Dr. James F. Lee's Freshman Lecture on September 21.

Dr. Lee, who presides over the College infirmary when not feeling the pulses of ailing townfolk of Mt. Vernon, outlined the history of, and detailed the symptoms of the social diseases.

Concluding by advocating a "better safe than sorry" policy, the Doctor then invited questions from his audience. Following an embarrassing silence the group was dismissed.

can easily take at least two more, which he cautiously proceeds to do. By this time, he is sure that he is happily drunk, and proceeds on this basis, actually being cold sober, and having the best time of all, except of course the chaperones, who are privileged to witness the spectacle.

I shall not attempt to discuss the drinking habits of the dates or faculty, desiring to keep both my health and my three average, but if you have had the persistence to bear with me this far, you are now experienced enough to judge for yourself. I recommend it as an interesting pastime to pursue when the date and conversation lag; good hunting!

be expressed quantitatively. It must be measured in the spirit and pride the squad has in its work. Have you, the one's in the grandstands, ever speculated upon the hours of work spent in conditioning. The number is, as is the effort, enormous. Therefore, no matter what may be a bystander's opinion of the Lord's prospects, it is every true Kenyon man's obligation to be present at the opener. Not to do so would be to let down the team, and, in turn, a refusal to support something that represents Kenyon and You.

fense is daily improving on offense. Behind them will be Rathman, Wroth, and Derrickson. Lane Wroth will double at center. Lloyd Derrickson, has been converted from a backfield slot to that of guard. In time he should become a menace for opposing backs.

The center position will be filled by Fred Palmer and Lane Wroth. An excellent snapper-back and blocker, Palmer will be valuable also as a line backer. Fred, by the way, played a fine brand of football on the '39 squad at Kenyon.

Chuck J'Anthony blocking back and field general will Captain the team in its first game with Otterbein. Chuck is the other veteran from last years unbeaten team. Left half-back is aptly filled by Bud Hughes. A devastating runner with the necessary drive to go all the way, Bud can be counted for lot of yardage. "Bull" Marshall will hold down the right half-back position. The "Bull" is a knock em down, drag em out sort of plunger. Charley Allen, full back, will do most of the passing and kicking; moreover, he can be counted for some fancy running. In reserve are Bell, Howe, Harbison, and Bryant. These four are capable reserves and will no doubt see considerable action.

Now that you are familiar with the team I will try to prophesy the future outcome of the season. We will have a brilliant backfield which will go only if the line can open the holes. It is a known fact that the team will be light, but it has the necessary equipment to overcome this handicap. We can look forward to a good season filled with a great deal of fast football. The first three games will be the hardest for us but we hope, you, the student body will come out to cheer us on to victory. Remember Kenyon hasn't been beaten since the Oberlin game on October 31st, 1942 — Your support can help keep our record unblemished.
